The international money experts, bankers and policy makers in the global finance industry will highlight the US dollar and its impact on currencies trends at the Forex 2008 which opens today at the Crowne Plaza Hotel.

"The two-day third edition of Middle East Forex 2008 is expected to see a total attendance of 2300 participants making one of the prime events of the year in financial industry," Katia Tayar Founder and President of Arabcom group, the organiser of the event said yesterday.

According to figures over $3.4 trillion forex trade is carried out every day across the world.

"We have carefully selected Bahrain for its world class infrastructure, for being the 1st Financial market in the Gulf Region, the 1st country in the region to sign a Free Trade agreement, being the best regulated market, a relaxed visitors visa procedure, the freest economy in the Arab World and many more attractive aspects," she said.

Organised by Arabcom Group, the event will be held under the title 'informing and educating the individual and institutional investors.'

"With the mission to stimulate business, foster education, and raise the level of awareness of investors, beginners, and interested ones, by creating a more conscious marketplace, this two-day expo and conference is aimed at addressing the issue of the growing trend of currency trading" Jean Louis Farwagi, VP Arabcom, said: "It is very important for traders or interested investors before they launch themselves into Forex trading to learn on how to read and understand technicalities as well as fundamentals that affects the currency markets. Therefore we are launching an open invitation to all the public to come and participate at the conferences and visit the exhibit area and benefit from the international experts who continuously go live on Bloomberg and CNBC Europe and other financial TVs and regional TV networks." He added: "This event will meet the demand from traders and investors in the Middle East and the world over for educational resource on currency, investing and on the economy.

The Middle East Forex Trading Expo and conference aims to give today's traders more choices and opportunities to profit from the currency trading market's potential and its
